Federal agencies rely on high-performing HR teams to play a proactive role in setting workforce priorities. Given their unique perspective, HR employees must be empowered to lead recruiting, hiring and engagement efforts to bolster the overall capabilities of their agency’s workforce.

The Advancing HR Leaders program is a professional development opportunity for federal HR employees looking to increase their individual impact and influence on team and agency operations. Throughout this program, participants develop skills needed to take initiative and cultivate support for their ideas. Each session focuses on different methods to help individuals become more confident and capable stewards of their agency’s critical HR strategy.

Participants learn how to identify opportunities for change and collaborate with others most effectively, both within their teams and across the organization.
